

OVERVIEW

I am a scientist trained in acoustic phonetics, speech perception, and auditory neuroscience. I study the perception and representation of speech sounds, especially as it relates to distinctive feature theory, auditory attention, and speech intelligibility.

Current position: postdoctoral research associate, Laboratory for Auditory Brain Science & Neuroengineering ([LABS]<sup>N</sup>, PI: Adrian KC Lee), part of the Institute for Learning & Brain Sciences at the University of Washington.

Current projects: Characterizing speech sound representation using EEG; measuring effort-related pupillary response in auditory attention tasks.
